Parker says labor trafficking is the “use of force, fraud, and coercion for the process of inducing someone to do that forced labor.” She says traffickers often target vulnerable populations like foster kids, people who are homeless, and immigrants.

Special Report: The Untold Story of Labor Trafficking

Realizing that they were on the losing end, Itliong appealed to Mexican-American labor leader Cesar Chavez to stage a unified strike. On that same September, the two groups took a strike vote, and in the end, decided to fight for the same cause. It was the beginning of the longest strike in American labor history.
